Industry and Company News

Optum Labs funds opening of digital health research center at Cornell

- “Optum Labs, the research and development arm of UnitedHealth Group, and Cornell Tech have created a collaborative research hub at Cornell University in New York that will focus on precision behavioral health and advancing equity in healthcare. The move, said Optum, was spurred by recent innovations in artificial intelligence, machine learning, mobile sensing technology and virtual reality, which are creating opportunities for improving care. Optum Labs is providing funding in 2022-23, which will drive research in precision behavioral health, extended reality for aging in place, and equitable human and algorithmic decision-making. Leaders of the partnership said the it was formed with the specific intent of transforming patient health outcomes and care by incorporating new types of health data from wearables and internet of things (IoT) devices and creating new types of remote intervention and care delivery using augmented reality and virtual reality actuation technologies with computational techniques.” Healthcare Finance | 11/30/2022

Elevance Health Launches AI-Driven Nutrition Tracker

- “Elevance Health — formerly Anthem, Inc. has announced the expansion of its Sydney Health application with the addition of a nutrition tracker function driven by artificial intelligence (AI). The new feature, called Nutrition Tracker, recognizes foods or an entire meal, providing virtual nutrition advice to improve affiliated health plan members’ overall health and well-being. Using smartphone cameras and typing-free nutrition tracking, affiliated health plan members can quickly capture their nutrition information, make their food logs a part of their health records, and with consent, share with their healthcare provider to receive personalized feedback. The Nutrition Tracker feature will be available and integrated into the free affiliated health plan member app Sydney Health and is available to affiliated health plan members on fully insured plans, all Medicare plans, and ASO plans with access to the “My Health Dashboard” feature of Sydney Health.” HIT Consultant | 12/05/2022

Tomorrow Health launches tech to automate orders of medical equipment as at-home care grows

- “Tomorrow Health, a health tech company, has launched a clinical rules engine that automates orders of durable medical equipment. The latest offering aims to streamline what Tomorrow Health calls a fragmented system. The engine automates the ordering process, simplifying administrative bottlenecks and shortening the time it takes for patients to get medical equipment into their homes, according to the company. The engine leverages machine learning and millions of rule combinations to digitize clinical, health plan and compliance data needed for supplier reimbursement. It integrates with electronic health records systems and relies on a five-step questionnaire for providers, customized to patients’ health plans, which then can approve or deny a request automatically and send to a supplier who can process orders the same day. The startup raised $60 million earlier this year.” Fierce Healthcare | 12/07/2022

Mark Cuban Cost Plus Drug Company partners with PBM EmsanaRx

- “Mark Cuban Cost Plus Drug Company (MCCPDC) announced a partnership with pharmacy benefit manager EmsanaRx to allow employers and employees access to lower-cost prescription drugs via a new platform called EmsanaRx Plus. EmsanaRx Plus is a supplemental discount drug platform designed specifically for employers. It utilizes EmsanaRx’s ability to integrate with employer-sponsored drug benefits, and employees can use their health plan benefits while accessing their medication through the platform. MCCPDC is a public-benefit corporation and online pharmacy that provides medications at a lower cost by working directly with distributors and manufacturers. EmsanaRx is a pharmacy benefit manager for self-funded employers that was launched by the national employer group the Purchaser Business Group on Health (PBGH) in 2021. The partnership expands MCCPDC from the direct-to-consumer market to the employer market.” MobiHealthNews | 12/08/2022

Memora Health and PeriGen partner to coordinate postpartum healthcare

- “Memora Health, a virtual care delivery and management platform, announced its partnership with perinatal and prenatal health AI company, PeriGen, to provide coordinated women’s healthcare from childbirth to postpartum. Founded in 2000, PeriGen makes software products focused on childbirth. Its Early Warning System and Clinical Decision Support tool use AI to monitor patients in labor and find potential issues that need to be addressed. Memora Health is an AI-enabled platform for managing complex care needs, including messaging, automated reminders, metrics and scheduling. The collaboration will allow health systems nationally to perform continued care during labor and delivery to post-discharge monitoring for the same patient.” MobiHealthNews | 12/14/2022

Pfizer, Anumana team up to develop AI algorithm for cardiac amyloidosis detection

- “Anumana, a joint venture between EHR data company nference and the Mayo Clinic, entered into a multiyear partnership with Pfizer to develop an AI-based tool for the early detection of cardiac amyloidosis. Under the agreement, Anumana will research and pursue FDA De Novo classification for an algorithm that could find signals within electrocardiograms (ECGs) that hint at the condition. The partners also aim to gain regulatory clearance in Europe and Japan. The Mayo Clinic and nference launched Anumana in 2021. The joint venture has licensed Mayo Clinic ECG algorithms for low ejection fraction, pulmonary hypertension and hyperkalemia, all of which have received FDA Breakthrough Device Designation. Earlier this year, Anumana announced a strategic collaboration with Novartis to develop AI tools to detect cardiovascular diseases. They’ll first focus on algorithms that analyze ECGs to find left ventricular dysfunction, which can lead to heart failure, and atherosclerotic cardiovascular disease, which can cause heart attack and stroke. Last month, Anumana announced it had acquired NeuTrace, a company developing AI applications for assessing electrical signals in the heart.” MobiHealthNews | 12/15/2022
